1. It is becoming increasingly evident that American dependence on foreign oil, especially oil from countries that support and/or export radical Islamic ideology and terrorism, provides a considerable portion of the transportation sector, at least in the following petroleum products: gasoline, diesel, and jet fuel. While there have been some efforts to diversify the transportation sector, neither ethanol nor biodiesel have been able to displace fossil fuels, and neither provide any significant energy security. It is therefore proposed that the following petroleum products be phased out of the transportation sector: gasoline, diesel, and jet fuel. This would allow the transportation sector to be more self-sufficient and reduce our dependence on foreign oil.
